Below are some of the different types of chroma keying effects that are available in Sapphire, including the Ripple Color corrector, Chroma Key, Tap To Color Correct and Color Lift effects. Each of these color keying effects creates a new copy of the source footage that is a certain color, which can then be used to replace the original source footage in your After Effects project. After Effects allows you to apply these effects to different layers and control the blending between source and replacement clips. You can use the Sapphire Ripple Color Corrector to fix color balance issues in your footage by cloning a specific area of the source footage that represents an area of similar color or exposure. The Sapphire Chroma Key effect is used to create a new copy of your source footage that is a specific color. This effect is used to lighten or darken specific areas in your footage so that they appear to be a specific color. The Sapphire Tap To Color Correct effect allows you to preselect a specific area of your source footage by simply tapping on the frame that you want to select. After selecting the frame, a color line is applied to the selected area. This effect can be used to preselect a specific color or range of colors to be replaced within your project. The Sapphire Color Lift effect allows you to simply draw a straight line on top of the color line you created using the Tap To Color Correct effect. If you make a mistake when drawing a line with the Color Lift effect, you can simply erase the line, and the source footage will remain untouched. If you don't want to apply color keying effects to the entire sequence of your footage, you can always use the Sapphire Image Correction effect. This effect will allow you to pick a Background I'm trying to get a Sapphire 5 to write an.apl version of a small plugin that I need to use for my application. So far the only way I can get it to compile is if I use the full version of CC. I can tell that the plugin uses OSX/Carbon API calls so using a Clang/LLVM build environment seems to work much better. The problem I've downloaded the source for the official CC Apl/Obj framework, and I'm able to build the plugin using nmake -f makefile.nmake for an.apl file. But when I try and compile an Apl file built with the CC framework, it says something like: [..]/lib/libSapphirePlugins-iPhone.a(__NNP__SapphirePluginMac.a-framework): unknown type name '__NNP__SapphirePluginMac' This happened using the following command line in the Apl workspace: /Applications/Xcode.app/Contents/Developer/Toolchains/XcodeDefault.xctoolchain/usr/bin/clang -D__SSP__ -Xclang -i -D__NNP__SapphirePluginMac -The Build Results -O1 -ggdb -v -c -fmessage-length=0 -fsignals-compat -fobjc-runtime=macosx-fragile-10.6
